Eating

It is a famous Lingnan city with various styles and overflowing with unique charm. The New Year flower market is full of flowers, people are smiling and praying for good things. On weekdays, the teahouse is very lively, people sit around and share morning tea, shrimp dumplings, barbecued pork buns and other snacks are exquisite and delicious. The rice noodle rolls are delicate and smooth, and the aroma of roast meat is fragrant. Walking on the streets, there is a strong atmosphere of life everywhere.

◆ Shrimp Dumplings 虾饺

The signature dish of Cantonese morning tea, the dough is as thin as a cicada's wing, wrapped with fresh shrimp and pork bamboo shoots, shaped like a half moon. After steaming, it is crystal clear, and the juice bursts out when bitten. The shrimp meat is chewy and sweet, and paired with soft and tender stuffing, the taste is rich and layered. It is a classic must-have for morning tea.

◆ Barbecued Pork Buns 叉烧包

The soft dough is slightly cracked, revealing the honey-glazed barbecued pork filling. The lean pork is roasted until bright red, diced and added to the filling. The mixture of sweet and salty, the outer skin is soft and the inner filling is fragrant and moist. It is a must-order for breakfast tea for the old Cantonese.

◆ Steamed Siu Mai 干蒸烧麦

Guangzhou dry steamed siu mai is a classic Cantonese breakfast. It is made with half-fat and lean pork and shrimp as the main ingredients, and water chestnuts and chopped mushrooms are added to make a granular filling. It is kneaded into a pomegranate shape with thin dough and topped with crab roe. After steaming, the skin is soft and the filling is elastic. The meat aroma, shrimp freshness, and water chestnuts are crispy and intertwined. It is salty, slightly sweet, and juicy. It is delicious when paired with tea to relieve greasiness.

◆ Red Rice Sausage 红米肠

The red rice skin is wrapped with fried crispy net skin and fresh shrimp, and the three colors overlap to make it look good. It has a triple taste of soft, crispy and springy. It is even more delicious when dipped in peanut sauce. It is a creative way to have a good morning tea.

◆ Roast Goose 烧鹅

Qingyuan goose is roasted on fruit wood, with crispy skin like glass, tender and juicy meat, and fat permeating the flavor. Paired with sour plum sauce, it is sour and sweet to relieve greasiness, with fragrant skin and tender meat, a representative of the "hard dishes" of Cantonese roast meat.

◆ Barbecued Pork 叉烧

Selected pork neck is marinated with barbecued pork sauce, honey, etc., and slowly roasted over charcoal or in an oven until the skin is burnt and red, showing an attractive honey color. The meat is tender and juicy, and the salty and sweet taste permeates the texture, with the burnt aroma and meaty aroma blending together. It can be eaten directly, or paired with rice, used as a filling for barbecued pork buns, or stir-fried with vegetables. The versatile flavor runs through morning tea and dinner, showing the exquisite control of the Cantonese cuisine on the heat and seasoning.

◆ Roast Pork 烧肉

The skin-on pork belly is roasted until the skin is crispy and the meat is tender. The golden and crispy skin makes a "crunch" sound, and the fat is melted without being greasy. Dip it in sugar or sauce, it is salty and slightly sweet, and it is a common delicacy on festive tables.

◆ Roast Rice 肠粉

Guangzhou rice noodle rolls are a classic street food with a strong sense of fireworks. Rice is ground into a thin rice noodle skin, which is soft, smooth and has a natural rice aroma. It can be wrapped with pork, beef, shrimp, eggs and other fillings, and topped with a secret sauce made of soy sauce, dried shrimp, rock sugar, etc. The steaming rice noodle rolls are in your mouth, and the delicate rice noodle skin, the freshness of the fillings, and the salty and sweet sauce are cleverly combined. Every bite is full of the warmth of the market.

◆ Claypot Rice 煲仔饭

Claypot rice is a classic Cantonese staple food. It is cooked in a clay pot with rice, cured meat, spare ribs, chicken and other ingredients. Under slow fire, the rice absorbs the fat and aroma of the ingredients, and a golden and charred rice crust forms at the bottom of the pot. When the lid is opened, the hot air is wrapped with the aroma of cured meat. After mixing well, the rice grains are oily, the cured meat is salty and fragrant, the meat is tender, and the rice crust is crispy. One spoonful of it is full of the warm taste of smoke and wok, which is a soothing homely delicacy in winter.

◆ Double Skin Milk 双皮奶

Double-skin milk is the soul of Cantonese desserts, with fresh milk, egg white and sugar as the main ingredients. After steaming the milk, two layers of milk skin are condensed, the upper layer is sweet and mellow, and the lower layer is tender and smooth like fat, melting in the mouth. It is refreshing when eaten cold, and warms the stomach when eaten hot. The fragrance of milk and egg blends together, and the sweetness is just right. It not only carries the pursuit of the original taste of the ingredients by the old Cantonese, but also becomes a sweet comfort suitable for all ages with its delicate taste.
